Note Adobe calls layers _attached layers_ because they're associated with a specific open layer. A layer's anchoring point (Figure 1-9) is a tiny thumbnail representation of the layer. This thumbnail appears in the Layers panel and also in the Tools panel's Layers panel, at the lower-right corner of the layer. When you click a layer thumbnail, its anchor point becomes blue (as shown in Figure 1-9), which identifies it as the active layer. Figure 1-9. Top: Anchoring points are blue. The tiny layer thumbnail appears at the lower-right corner of the Layers panel. This thumbnail also appears at the lower-right corner of the layer thumbnail shown in the lower pane. Click the thumbnail to open the layer-editing interface for the active layer. Bottom: You can open the layer-editing interface for another layer by selecting its thumbnail and pressing the key. * Duplicate Layers opens a duplicate of the current layer. The new layer is named using the top layer's name, and it is displayed with a unique background color. As in the case of a duplicate layer, the Anchoring Point of the new layer is added to the bottom layer's anchoring point. You may find it convenient to keep a set of duplicates of your active layer to use for certain purposes. For example, you may create a new set of layer to apply your favorite filter, and then create another set for another purpose. You can quickly switch between the two as needed.

Day 14 - Team - Southern Rhino Run 2013 Carthage, Iowa The Carthage River Arts Festival was in full swing on Friday, July 18th, with a huge stage and tent set up right in the middle of the river. We walked around a few galleries and shops, but needed a break. We found the Dizzy Frog Cafe and Brewery, but instead of stopping for lunch, we just wanted water. We all felt dehydrated after the day's running. There was a big craft beer selection, and the food was good. We enjoyed some of the 'cheese garlic bread' and homemade 'black bean and bacon burritos.' After finishing off our drinks, we decided to walk to the Zoo. We grabbed some lemonade and then walked to the Zoo. We had lots of fun in the reptile exhibits. The western rattlesnakes were amazing. They are smaller than I thought. I need to compare the rattles with my old ones. We saw a couple of large tortoises, a tortoise and a turtle mom and baby, a snapping turtle, turtles in stasis, a long-necked plucked frog, a blue frog, the snake show, a beaver, ducks and a whole lot more. We had another quick breakfast at the Dizzy Frog, and then walked home. A big thank you to Ruth for sending pics and texts. Thanks to Gigi for editing them for this site. ...on Friday the 13th It's the end of the week, and the only thing that's on, is the day of the Chicago fair. There is nothing else to do, that we know of, except work on the condo. We will leave for our field trip tomorrow. ...what would happen if I wear red, white, and blue Tomorrow's schedule: 8:30-8:50-9:00- breakfast at the hotel 9:00- 9:30- Get up and get moving (leave the condo to get some exercise)- 30 mi training run in the corn fields 9:30-11:00- the rehearsal for the Festivus Pole performance 11:00-12:30- get in the car, to the fairgrounds 12:30-1:00- break for lunch at the fair 1:00-2:00- open skate demo 3:00-3:15
